We had triple digit heat for days at a time which made life miserable for Bayview residents, especially seniors, children and people living with access and functional needs. While it may be raining outside this week, the heat is predicted to return as soon as May. This year will be different. Thanks to a grant from the Dept. of Public Health, Resilient Bayview is crafting an extreme weather strategy that will make sure that when the heat returns to our community be ready to protect the health and well-being of our neighbors. Under the leadership of Resilient Bayview's Felisia Thibodeaux / GL Hodge / Veronica Shepard, a cohort of agencies, non-profits and universities has come together to craft a strategy that empowers residents, their friends, their service providers and the community at large to prepare for, and respond to, heatwaves. The first step in advancing this strategy is to convene a workshop with partner agencies, such as yours, to secure your input on our approach. We hope you will join us on April 26th at the Bayview YMCA. Workshop Details: Provide you with the very latest data from the Dept. of Health regarding Climate Change and how it is impacting the health and well-being of Bayview Residents. Be briefed on the new Resilient Bayview Heatwave Preparedness Campaign which is customized to the unique audiences we have in our community.
