AGENDA ITEMS FOR 10/16/2018

THEME: Mental Health Awareness

INTRODUCTIONS

-Welcome, housekeeping and overview of the agenda

PRESENTATIONS

1. Southeast Child/Family Therapy Center - Omolade Rosalyn Roddy, LCSW Supervisor, SECFTC/Kuumba Healing Project - Omolade introduced herself, she is a therapist at the Southeast Child Family Therapy Center. Her today to talk about two of their programs...They serve the most diverse population in the city, Have mandarin, Cantonese and Spanish speaking staff. Provide individual, group and family therapy, work with schools and have groups right now in school. Safety Seeking groups for parents, a rock climbing group for kids, basically provide most service other mental clinics do. Self-referrals work, can take a referral for a child just need parent consent. Will provide family therapy for the family, provide family therapy for the child, opening cases for adults/parents because they have an affected child. Omolade shares the flyer for their center but in error left off Bayview, they do serve the Bayview Community. At one time BVHP had the majority of service funding for Mental Health, but overtime, some of the programs

disappeared. Due to this, there was a large population of AA that were not receiving clinical service, after a long history of doing so. She has been there since 1995, she provided history of their program and the work done. They had a site in Geneva Towers and were very imbedded in the community. Since 1995, have been serving the AA community and doing that outreach. She left, returned in 2006, and saw demographic and service changes. They were not seeing as many people of AA coming in, had growing populations of other communities, AA makes up less than 5% of SF community, so started to create a program to target that disadvantaged AA population with the KUUMBA Project. The program addresses the needs for AA Bayview Community families. An African centered program that serves everyone; focus on families of African descent. Cultural based and recognizing the culture and addressing the critical theory of why community shows up or not. Are more community based, provide groups, serve adults, and are in schools. MLK, Carver and Downtown are the three schools they are piloting supportive services for students in schools and supporting youth around their curriculum. A big piece they do is help in advocating about learning differences. Like why are the IEP's still the same? They help by checking in about the kids even needing to have IEP's each year, the kids are stressed out. They help children navigate and reduce the impact of trauma and stress. We work with CCSF in the community with a program for them to earn their mental health certification program. City provides a nice stipend while earning that certification, basically making sure that students work with them and have opportunity for internships and can work and serve the community. Work with other agencies that may not have their own teams, hoping to build the program aa community in crisis. Need a DPH program, to help push this. Connect the with the PUC health and harvest fair. Able to hire more, have four AA descent, work with everyone, even though an AA centered model, can serve everyone. Building relationship is better than Request for qualifications.

2. L.E.G.A.C.Y - Inez Love, Youth Development Team Coordinator - Ines Love introduced herself, she works for LEGACY, which is a peer-based and peer-lead Mental Health Agency, which are non-clinical. They work with families who have kids in are involved in the Mental Health System, Foster Care, Juvenile Justice System, Special Education and CPS. Work with the parents, to give them support in a navigating the system with their children. Have a youth involvement team, younger to TAY, age range is 12-24 yrs. with that population have a mentorship program. All the staff have had similar experiences with their children, so their programs are peer-based and led which makes their program unique. We serve the families involved in the system, can self-refer, or through CFT's (child family team meetings, YBC, Huckleberry, the Schools, will attend IEP's, apt. for parent and child, can accompany on apt. for children and families for support. One can make a referral to them when families need support with their IEPs for example. Referral forms are online and can be faxed or sent via email. Have several programs to support parents and youth, can provide services in Cantonese and Spanish. Is it online? Can be emailed... the referral form... turnaround time is quick have openings now for English, have a Spanish services waiting list, it's the longest one due to being down two bilingual staff. Groups are also offered; some of the groups are a Girls Empowerment Group for girls dealing with external and internal pressures at College Track right now. Most other groups are open, currently providing a drumming group starting next Thursday, for trauma-exposed families of DV or other trauma. Have Spanish and Cantonese support groups for resource and support for monolingual speaking families. Monthly they have a monthly support night for families, activities around mental health, have childcare for the kids, and have a mentorship session service for young adults at the TAY age, same referrals, just need to note “youth”. Young adults are paired with mentors who have had that experience in the system (peer based). Q - Can a student be referred to drumming? You do not have to be a client to attend most of their groups; it is required for families on Family Support Night. Q about Restorative Justice, it is practiced in the SFUSD system, Focus is on therapeutic process and community but Restorative Practice is not particularly practiced. If you know any inspiring young people with that experience and history that want to give back, let Ines know. They are always looking for more mentors. Mentorship - if you know any young people who would like to give back and be a mentor, they pay $18 an hour and provide between 15-20 hrs. a week of work. They will receive training, earn a certification but a one year commitment is asked. Also they need to have experience in the mentioned systems to qualify, it can be personal experience or their family such as sibling. A new group in the winter will be a WRAP, geared towards TAY invited, Wellness Recovery Action Plan for themselves, how to write a WRAP for themselves. There is an incentive for participation. CAB is for parents and one for TAY, called the and the TAYCAB. Flyers are for groups, participants are paid $25 for going to group first time. . Ines talked about their Community Advisory Boards, their CAB is TAY based and called the TAYCAB, comprised of a group of parents and TAY (young adults) whom meet separately and share their experiences to help provide input for policy and program changes. One example is the Emoji Form, it was implemented and changed for youth to let the therapist know that speaking today for example is difficult, where youth can circle an Emoji to describe their feelings and presentation for the clinician, to let them know how their day has been or how it is going. This form is still being used in program today. Sometimes the parents speak on panels. Flyers are going around for the TAYCAB group; both groups’ participants are given a $25 gift card each meeting. Please contact Ines Love at 415-920-7714, and Inez.love@sfdph.org and Dematra Ellison at 415-920-7702 and dematra.ellison@sfdph.org

Services at Bayview Hill Gardens and at Jelani House; you can find more information on their website. They serve ages 5 yrs. and up, for a referral the best way is have the client walk-in or have them call themselves. All services are available if you meet the needs, including Psychiatric Services and their Mental Health Case management. How does therapy work? First appointments are assessments and check-ins about trauma, culture, family life and whatever may be affecting them. Then we develop a treatment plan and diagnosis with the patient. Talk about and provide some interventions that are cognitive behavioral therapy based and work with the client to help them be aware of their thoughts, introducing mindfulness, stress reduction, everyday communication skills, psycho-education about how the psyche works and how it may be affecting them, like shame, which is often a symptom. Also introduce harm reduction and trauma informed practices. Please call or have them walk in, you can contact her at jarae.clark@bayviewci.org ... Currently there no Spanish Speaking staff, but are able to use the language line to engage Spanish speaking only parent/providers with bilingual youth. Yes it is important to have a Spanish speaking therapist, it can create a barrier, but the language service helps address that. Again, for the Youth Services at Carroll including Mental Health Services, any youth can walk and inquire. BVHPCI Website Link to Core Services

2. The Center for Harm Reduction Therapy - Joy Brown, ACSW, Staff Therapist – Joy is here today to talk about their RFP they were awarded. It is to provide mobile mental health therapy for community and is here to talk about their program and find potential partners and referrals. They will be working with TAY 18-29 with CFS and Adult Services for young adults aged 25-29, partnering with the Homeless Alliance to provide Clinical Therapy and Case Management. It will be a van or truck and will be going the site to provide the services. He provided a handout of the vehicle they are in process of acquiring. Their team works in community, for agencies that do not have MH services now. Contracted to provide therapy in the evening, goal to work with homeless youth, trying to meet more people in the southeast to find partners, establishing spots and times where the clients are. Currently coming to Southeast to work with other agencies, and they need to find agencies with already established relationships with clients, where they can park and engage with the patients, and benefit from a warm handoff. Usually try to make it easy, work with street outreach, going out and getting relationships built, eventually build it to a more in-depth relationship to engage with client for mental health. Works with the Homeless Youth Alliance and together they provide useful hygiene items, clothing, help make sure the youth's basic needs are met, meeting these needs help with engaging the clients. They work with and refer patients/clients to Bay Area Legal Aid, Q - What happens if clients are in crisis? Joy responded that they can work with a client first and address their crisis and do the paperwork after. Joy clarified the "Mobile" as in being in different parts of the City, they are not the City's Mobile Crisis unit. Q - How does an ongoing connection work? By showing up at the same places and times, each week for the clients to gain trust and see them consistently. This new pilot program is starting now, looking for van, also open to being in supportive housing, could be on site using unused office space. Doing needs assessments, talking about how it works, do you have

COMMUNITY BUILDING – REPORT BACK

1. Rebuilding Together SF – Bayview Rebuilding My Block Report Back- Jenn Leshnow, Program Director and team are here today to talk about the recent Bayview Rebuild Event. The event was a block party of free repair and home installations. Seniors with a Disability or families qualify based on income were served in the Bayview. The goal was to make sure everyone has a safe place to call home. At the recent event, RBTSF helped 7 families and do some beautification work at the Youngblood Coleman Park. One comment from a first time participant community member was that they were very happy, they shared that no one has talked to them before about the service. There was good community outreach from neighbors, community sponsors. Jenn talked about partnerships and their hard work to build a great SF Fix-It team; they installed solar lights, partnered with Habitat for Humanity to make sure homes are getting resources, explained that they were fortunate that a small non-profit can find opportunities and leverage resources, to make the repairs go further and faster. Neighbors helping neighbors and the Community Partnership Outreach Manager, Joseph shared that it's key to build partnerships and really building a collaborative to work together, he worked for SF Rec & Park. Their programs operate all year long, homeowners and renters, safety and health, grab bars, home repairs, detectors; community just needs to fill out the quick online applications. Hearing community stories, good to know neighbors, upcoming year will be their third year in the BVHP, 30th year as an organization, would like to work tougher and build capacity for people. The community build days are once a year, September and October, as a volunteer or member, how to get involved - you can apply to everything online from electrician and plumbing to general labor. Q - Have volunteer opportunities for High School Students? Jenn thinks so, but will find out... would love to reach out to more unions, work with the carpenters, would love to make personal connections looking for several people to fill open employment opportunities.
