PRESENTATIONS

1. Congestion Pricing - Brian Haagsman, Outreach Coordinator, Walk SF

Welcome everyone, Brian shares about his programming and work on congestion pricing outreach for Vision Zero SF. He asks, "how did you get around?" There are many different modes people use to get around besides driving, Vision Zero aims to make streets safe, they are the city's pedestrian advocacy group. They are reaching out to folks about the process to address the worsening congestion. He asks, how do we actually solve the congestion. At the same time, air pollution risk covers half the city and more and more people are coming here. He showed a map of high injury areas, the most dangerous streets. Due to congestion the city is considering charging people to drive in the busiest times of the day, something that has been done in other cities. NY was the first to implement a toll when passing through their city. Today, fewer people drive, air pollution has gone down, asthma rates are down, etc. SF had a similar plan about ten years ago. There was a question of concern for businesses in that area, what impact did it have on them. If you want to share feedback use this site, bit.ly/Bayviewroads what would the proposed cost be. The city is studying a number of pricing plans and who would be charged. There would be exemptions for those who live there. City is here studying over the course of the year, and should have some preliminary results by the end of the year. The plan is to conduct as many meetings with the community as possible, the purpose is to make it as equitable as possible. The City is trying to take in all the information, to propose a thorough and considerate plan. WalkSF is getting more and more people involved in the process. Where would the funding go? Use it to have more buses and trains, taking suggestions. Please contact Brian for more information and stay up to date @ brian@walksf.org

2. Transportation Options Bay Wheels Ebikes - Rachel Aikawa, Community Affairs Coordinator, LYFT

Rachel from LYFT is here today to share about transportation and their Bay wheels Bikeshare program. She offers an overview - Lyft owns the largest bikeshare in the city. They rebranded their Ebike program to Bay Wheels, and work with SFMTA. They provide two types of bikes, some are newly relaunched, the bikes are part of their drop off and pick up system, with bike hubs throughout the city. The bikes are affordable and sustainable, and Lyft has a ten year contract to implement the program. They are to deploy 300 stations in San Francisco, starting East to the West, growing in the Sunset to over to here in the Bayview, with stations at Evans and New Hall and at the SECFC. There are a few more around the neighborhood and they are working to put some at the BVHP HOPE SF sites. EBIKES are electric and pedal assisted and have multiple parking options, dock anywhere in their designated zone. They relaunched in 2019, and now have about 2000 in SF with a goal of providing up to 4000. Any bike that is not properly parked, one can use 311 to notify LYFT about the bike/s. Rachel shared about their Equity and Youth programs - their main membership for them is the Bike Share for All, $5 the first year, after that $5 a month, 3 programs to qualify, you can apply online or in person at SFMTA. The three programs are CalFresh, SFMTA Lifeline and PGE Care. Once you end the trip, the time cumulates, it's 60 min a trip, each trip. There are 14 in the BV currently with 2 more coming. JUMP is leaving SF in the next few months so their bikes will be the only ones in town, were formerly Ford Bikes. Someone asked why they are so close together, they need to be close by each other to turn in your bike and end ride and to charge. Bikes can be parked on street bike racks if in the designated area. They are working with the city to make sure there are enough bike racks. Any suggestions, please share with them with SFMTA. Q- Who decides and what is the process? She shares that they have a planning team, work with SFMTA and usually have a community outreach stage before the rack's placement. They send out mailers and go to community events and do outreach, there is also a final public hearing for more input. Jobs - yes, they have jobs and are hiring. Motivate is their hiring program. Comment - Street cleaning needs more attention near the racks, they are supposed to clean them biweekly. The program is for 18+. Find them in community, Sunday Streets and Bayview Group Rides Contact information -raikawa@lyft.com

3. ConnectSF & SFMTA- Workshop & Survey - Celina Chan, Connect SF & Bradley Dunn, SFMTA

Connect SF is City program, they are looking at long range trans portion planning. What will it look like for our kids and grandkids, in the past agencies have done the planning by themselves. This time, doing it all together, in '95 the city had the Four Corridors plan and are just finishing up that plan's implementation. Some transportation changes came about from that plan. this time they/Connect SF began with Visioning, creating a Futures Task Force, and agreed on big goal areas and a vision for SF that included growing equitably and sustainably, with engagement from the community and their consensus. Their Phase 2 included a Statement of Needs, with a transit corridor study of streets and freeways. The study focused workshops were with youth and Southeast Communities, one with the Youth Commission and one with HPF families. They just completed two more last week, and will be finishing up soon. They are still collecting feedback, have an online survey, and are asking "what about today's problems?" Looking at different ways to implement fixes sooner, challenges exist today because of planning done years ago. As we make decisions, they will impact the transportation then (in the future), plan now for the future. Celina shares there are lots of programs and trying to align with existing city goals, they are interrelated, and promote sustainability. Connect SF as a program hopes to be in tune with the city. The City has a climate goal, and asks what if we didn't do any planning? where would the City be and be heading towards. She shared some key findings; in the southeast, there are longer commutes, if SFMTA continues as is, the transit service would fall short in communities of concern, would meet the City's sustainability goals, and contribute to increased congestion and transit crowding. Their goal is reaching the ConnectSF Vision. Q-SFMTA is in the process of updating the nextbus app. For more information see their presentation
