WHO: SF Strong

WHAT: Interns Needed

WHERE: San Francisco

WHEN: Ongoing

CONTACT: sfstrongposters@gmail.com www.sfstrongposters.wixsite.com/sfstrong

NOTES: We offer students a way to gain practical business skills through experience in digital outreach, graphic design (depending on students' interests), and meetings with experienced advisors. The project itself consists of conducting digital outreach that encourages individuals and businesses to hang up posters in their windows that promote the following of health guidelines. We are also working on figuring out new ways to reach out to and help communities that have been particularly affected by the pandemic, such as lower-income neighborhoods. We're primarily looking for high school juniors or seniors, but students of any age are welcome to apply! Our internship program is very low commitment, requiring only about five hours per week, though interns are welcome to commit as much of their time as they like. The project is almost exclusively intern-run, so we're looking for creative and motivated students who are excited to learn and take a more active role in their communities.

WHEN: January 1, 2022

CONTACT: Kimia Haddadan, Senior Housing Policy Planner, Citywide Division, San Francisco Planning Department Kimia.haddadan@sfgov.org (415) 575-9068

NOTES: The Housing Element ensures that San Francisco will have enough capacity to produce the number of housing units by income level prescribed by the Bay Area Association of Governments (ABAG) through the Regional Housing Need Allocation (RHNA). State Law requires that the Housing Element address, remove, or mitigate governmental and non-governmental constraints to housing production. In addition, the Housing Element is required to include policies that serve to provide: equal housing opportunities for San Francisco residents, assist in the development of housing, improve and conserve existing housing stock, preserve units at-risk of conversion from affordable to market rate, The Housing Element relies on robust public outreach and engagement to develop the policies and implementation programs that express San Francisco's housing priorities over the next eight years. This extensive outreach is supplemented with data analysis of San Francisco's housing trends and pressing housing needs, a site inventory analysis, and an evaluation of the implementing programs from the previous Housing Element.
