WHO: Nature in the City

WHAT: Job Opportunity - Garden Program Manager

WHERE: San Francisco

WHEN: Desire start date: November 1, 2023

CONTACT: Gardening Program Manager

NOTES: Nature in the City creates local solutions to global wildlife loss and the climate crisis through habitat stewardship, informative nature walks & events, and by providing tools and resources for people to participate in citizen science and lifelong learning. With a philosophy of equity embedded in its work, Nature in the City places community involvement and partnership as its cornerstones. Will you help Nature in the City continue to celebrate healthy ecosystems and expand a "homegrown national park" in private gardens across San Francisco? Nature in the City is hiring a Gardening Manager to oversee the Gardening program, including occasional corporate workdays held on weekdays in our public Habitat Stewardship program. The Gardening program helps create habitat-rich, climate-smart gardens throughout San Francisco. The Gardening Manager helps provide gardening services and supervises staff, developing their hands-on skills and knowledge. Nature in the City seeks a Garden Manager to help grow the program from servicing gardens three days a week with expansion of services to five days a week with help from a full-time Gardening Technician. The finances of the Gardening program are of utmost importance in balance with the sustainability and rest/care for sustaining the team's health, as the work can be strenuous. We intend for surplus income to help fund Nature in the City's public programs to preserve the City's wildlife and provide access to nature for everyone.

WHO: Flyaway

WHAT: An In-Person Conversation at MoAD: Curating from the Inside: Women Exposing Prison through Art and Poetry

WHERE: MoAD - 685 Mission Street: Ground floor of the St. Regis

WHEN: Wednesday, October 4, 2023, from 6:30pm - 8:30pm

CONTACT: Register for MoAD Conversation

NOTES: This conversation celebrates the launch of the digital exhibition The Only Door I Can Open: Women Exposing Prison through Art and Poetry on MoAD's website. It explores the challenges faced by women at the Central California Women's Facility in Chowchilla where both the co-curators and all of the artists for this exhibition reside, while uplifting the empowerment that telling their own stories can bring. Ultimately, the partnership between MoAD, Empowerment Avenue, and Flyaway Productions seeks to bring light to the conditions of incarcerated women, to humanize and connect them with those on the outside, and to insist on radical prison system change that significantly impacts BIPOC women.

WHO: Flyaway

WHAT: Flyaway Performances: If I Give You My Sorrows

WHERE: Space 124 - 401 Alabama Street

WHEN: October 6 - 15, 2023 at 7:30pm

CONTACT: Get More Info About Shows

NOTES: If I Give You My Sorrows starts with a bed. People often hear the phrase "women in bed." It's a phrase that can conjure lurid sex, objectification, and misogyny. In this historic moment repressing women's choices and women's bodies at the national level, we want to reframe women's beds as a place where our complexity and depth live. Where our bodies rest, transform, grieve, and repair. What secrets do we leave in our beds? What wounds do we bury there? How do our beds hold what is messy, tragic, and grueling? Research is rooted in the experience of three women, including trans women, currently and formerly incarcerated. Featured activists include Betty McKay, Lisa Strawn, and Tomiekia Johnson. The project features original music composed by Carla Kihlstedt and Pamela Z, and a performance by Laura Elaine Ellis, Sonsherée Giles, MaryStarr Hope, Jhia Jackson, and Megan Lowe. audiences are invited to view The Only Door I Can Open: Women Exposing Prison Through Art and Poetry, following each performance, which continues Flyaway's artist-as-activist work of prison systems change, in partnership with Empowerment Avenue and Museum of African Diaspora. This exhibit is offered by Empowerment Avenue and co-curated by Tomiekia Johnson and Chantell Jeannette, who are serving time at the Central California Women's Facility in Chowchilla. Works by six artists and three poets are featured in the collection and will be on view in person adjacent to Space 124 as well as on MoAD's website as a digital exhibition.
